CHAPTER 7

DIRECTING

CHAPTER ESSENCE AT A GLANCE:
Guide, inspire, and lead organizational personnel: four elements of directing (supervision, motivation, leadership, communication), Maslow hierarchy of needs, and overcoming communication barriers.

4 CORE PRINCIPLES TO UNDERSTAND FIRST

• Directing as Action Spark: While planning, organising, and staffing prepare the organizational stage, directing initiates actual human action through instructing, guiding, and motivating employees.

• Maslow Hierarchy of Human Needs: Sequential physiological (food, shelter), safety (job security), social (belonging), esteem (recognition), and self-actualization (maximizing personal potential) drives.

• Leadership Styles Taxonomy: Autocratic leadership (leader commands with central authority), Democratic leadership (decision-making shared with subordinates), and Laissez-faire leadership (full autonomy given to followers).

• Communication Barriers and Remediation: Organizational communication fails due to Semantic barriers (faulty translations), Psychological barriers (premature evaluation, mistrust), Organizational barriers, and Personal barriers.

CRUCIAL EXAM PRECAUTIONS & VALUATION RUBRIC SECRETS

• Alert: Financial incentives (pay, allowances, profit-sharing) fulfill lower-order physiological and safety needs; non-financial incentives (status, recognition, job autonomy) satisfy higher-order esteem and self-actualization needs.

• Alert: In Autocratic leadership, communication is strictly one-way downwards; in Democratic leadership, communication flows two-way with active subordinate participation.

• Alert: Semantic barriers relate to language ambiguities, bad technical jargon, and faulty translations; psychological barriers relate to state of mind, prejudice, and premature evaluation.
